

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An apparatus and method for characterizing or measuring chromatic dispersion in an optical fiber segment. The fiber is accessed at one end with a signal generator injecting modulating pulsed signals which are reflected at the other end of the fiber, the apparatus determining the phase difference between the modulation signals and the reflected modulation signals and calculating the chromatic dispersion therefrom.